

MELBOURNE'S HOUSING CRISIS

REALITY OF HOMELESSNESS

A shortage of housing and a lack of affordable accommodation has led to Melbourne's worst housing crisis to date.

HOMELESSNESS

WHAT DOES THE DATA TELL US

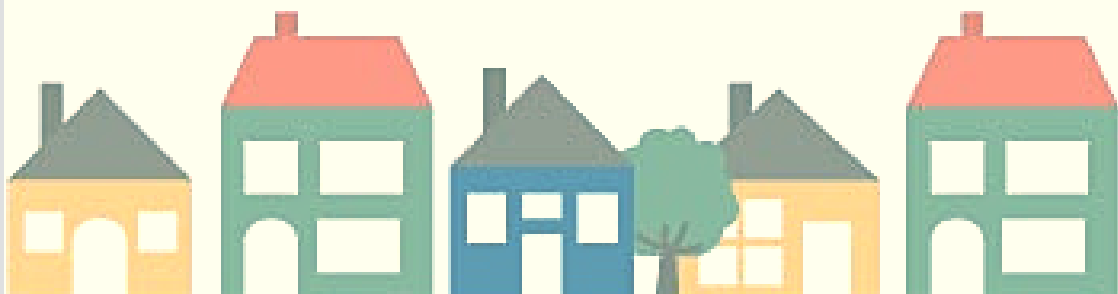

Homelessness affects many people and does not discriminate between ages, genders or cultures. In Australia homelessness is primarily caused by our housing crisis. Family violence, poverty and mental health are major contributing factors to homelessness, however people remain homeless due to a lack of affordable housing.

The 2016 census count found that Australia had a 14% increase of those experiencing homelessness. Victoria saw an increase to its homelessness population with a total of 24828 people identifying as homeless. In line with National trends, Victoria saw a rise in people living in severe overcrowding conditions with 44% of Victorian's experiencing housing crisis representing this group.

demand and no supply

A common misconception assumes that homelessness affects only those who “choose” to be homeless. Little thought is placed on why people find themselves experiencing homelessness or their lack of options to end their experience. The last decade has seen a significant shift to the access of affordable accommodation with 500 new applications for government housing being submitted monthly.

What was once an affordable housing option for low income earners, private rental has become unaffordable due to a lack of supply and a highly competitive rental market. Anglicare Australia's 2018 Rental Affordability Snapshot found that nationally only 6% of rental properties are affordable for low income earners. It concluded that single parents accessing the rental market find themselves in the same situation as those on government income support. The Snapshot also found that just 1% of properties were affordable for single people on the Aged Pension.

WOULD YOU SPEND $700 A WEEK FOR THIS?

COST

Emergency accommodation can cost up to $700 a week. Families often contribute to these costs, paying more than double what they would in private rental.

"It was the last time he was going to hurt me and the kids.. I left but had not family or friends. I was grateful for the help but the room was small, dirty and small...I would have paid less then that for a three bedroom private rental - Rachael

HEALTH

Families in emergency accommodation have no cooking facilities and often rely on take away adding to the daily costs of being homeless..

"Everyday I spend 30, 40, 50 dollars on take away, I cant afford this, my children are not getting healthy food because I have no where to cook for them" - Fatma

SELF-WORTH

Many people who are placed in crisis accommodation report that they have experienced bed bugs and they have had cockroaches in their room.

"I had been sleeping in my car for two weeks, all I wanted was a bed to sleep in and somewhere to showed. I spent one night in crisis accommodation and got bed bugs... I left the next day... I'm homeless but I have self respect - James

COST OF HOMELESSNESS

- 30% of people experiencing homelessness are employed" (ABS, Census 2016) ●

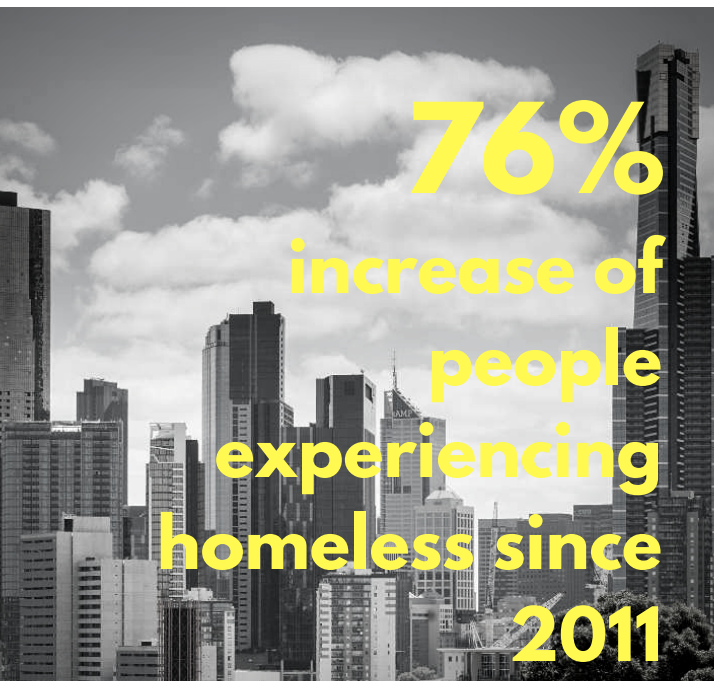

Across Melbourne's North and West suburbs, homelessness services spent $4.5 million dollars on emergency accommodation to assist families' experiencing homelessness. These families are often accommodated away from their supports such as friends, family, and schools due to limited options, with often substandard, highly priced, privatised motel rooms their only option.

Due to high rental costs, many residing in private rental often access support services for emergency relief assistance, many access food support, assistance to pay bills and material aid such as clothing. Many people find themselves paying excessively rent with no options to find something cheaper. The financial burden of renting in a high demand market limits people's capacity for financial independence resulting in increased demand on services.

"The hardest thing about renting is having to decide between food on the table or a roof over our heads" - Sarah

PRIORITISE HOUSING

Melbourne's housing crisis can be contributed to a lack of Government support to address housing and homelessness. Investment in housing development has resulted in a reduced amount of government housing development and those hit hardest are on low incomes. While the number of available rental properties is increasing, there is a decline in the number of affordable rental properties in Melbourne, with the median weekly rental amount being $420 per week.

The federal government invests 1.7 billion dollars annually into public housing, social housing and homelessness support services whereas $14 billion is lost in tax concessions to support home owners through capital gains tax and negative gearing.

“Billions of dollars more of public funding goes towards supporting housing investors, rather than ensuring everybody, including people on low incomes, have a home” Anglicare Australia

“Without sufficient affordable housing, we are fighting an uphill battle to end homelessness, because people are forced to cycle through rooming houses, crisis beds and other temporary accommodation”

- Jenny Smith, CEO,
Council to Homeless
Persons

WHAT WE CAN DO

OFFICIAL NOTE

Temporary emergency accommodation is not a housing solution to end homelessness. It is a band-aid to someone being “homeless tonight” but does not provide any permanency. A housing first model needs to be adapted to address key factors of homelessness and our Government must invest in social and public housing.

We need timely innovative solutions that create safe emergency accommodation options as soon as possible, while acknowledging the need for long term housing supply. If we do not address the bigger issues of housing supply and affordability in Melbourne, we will find that more and more people will be forced to sleep in cars and on our streets.

MORE HOUSES FOR PEOPLE

We need immediate and comprehensive solutions to increase our housing supply

- Inclusionary zoning legislation to require that 20% of any new developments be allocated to people awaiting social housing
- Innovative approaches to the development of 'tiny houses' that can be built sustainably, erected quickly and that provide safe, self contained accommodation
- A monumental boost to public and social housing

COUNCIL TO HOMELESS PERSONS

Everybody's Home campaign

- Support for first home-buyers, by setting the tax system to make it fairer for ordinary Australians wanting to buy a home.
- Develop a National Housing strategy to meet Australia's identified shortfall of 500,000 social and affordable rental homes.
- A better deal for renters, by changing the tenancy laws to protect tenants against evictions, unfair rent rises, discrimination and landlords who refuse to maintain properties.
- Immediate relief for Australians in chronic rental stress, by increasing Commonwealth Rent Assistance.
- A plan to end homelessness, to halve homelessness in five years and end it in 10.
